

10 Photographs You Should Know at Paris Photo LA 2014, by Complex Magazine (April 24, 2014)

Last year, we covered the first edition of Paris Photo in Los Angeles, which was held in sunny weather on the Paramount Studios lot. With a red carpet, a champagne-filled opening, and an experimental, inter-generational range of photography, it was certainly a success. There are more and more fairs each season, but it's nice to have a focused, tightly curated fair like Paris Photo in the city where image is everything, Los Angeles.

Based on the roster of photographers with solo shows at the 2014 LA edition alone, it's safe to say that the second edition is off to a strong start. Legends like Candida Höfer, William Eggleston, and Guy Bourdin meet newer names like Abigail Reynolds and Brian Bress for a mix that underscores the excellence of this fair.

Karin Apollonia Müller

Born: 1963

Hometown: Germany

Gallery: Diane Rosenstein Fine Art

Photographs from Müller's series "On Edge" and "Gate" are among the works featured at Paris Photo 2014. These images capture the photographer's overall aesthetic, which often captures disconnection in urban streets or solitary figures in natural landscapes.
