Terran Last Gun: Celestial Observations opens Saturday, May 30, 4-6pm at Diane Rosenstein Gallery. Santa Fe-based Pikani artist Terran Last Gun makes geometric drawings on antique ledger sheets. Seems like a simple enough obsession--but by replacing the narrative, figurative depictions of tribal figures and their historical exploits that defined the mid-to-late 19th-century Plains ledger tradition with sharp, hard-edged minimalism, Last Gun radically subverts expectations of the idiom. His recurring motifs of moon phases, solar movements, and fixed star points ground the influence of mid-century abstraction directly within Pikani cosmic symbolism. The vibrant bands of colored pencil and ink sit atop weathered financial grids where old cursive accounting signatures bleed through the composition, forcing the destructive legacy of the paper's original users into active discourse with the present and its discontents. On view in Hollywood through July 11; dianeroseinstein.com.
